Envy (Seven Deadly Sins Book 2) Laura Cooper

In the first part, LUST, young attorney Liz Martin had just moved to New York with her brother Palmer. They'd both had a tumultuous few years and were ready to put the past behind them and start fresh. But when Liz meets British born Carlton Michaud she's swept off her feet and begins to worry that he could never provide the dark desires she still craves.

ENVY begins as Carlton makes a bold move and introduces Liz to his best friends and partners. It's a giant step for a man who detests paparazzi and public life. But Liz has already discovered that Carlton isn't the only Senior Partner who's sleeping around. She hates cheaters more than anyone! Her previous boyfriend of eleven years had been caught red handed too, getting away from that ass had been one of the main reasons she so eagerly agreed to move to New York.

But the office has a new case and when Carlton asks her advice on a local Charleston Law Firm to partner with she has no choice but to recommend Frazier, Rice, Rutledge and Calhoun. Enter Benton Frazier, smart ass attorney and Liz's former cheating dom boyfriend. He's come to New York under the veil of smoothing out some rough edges regarding the Charleston Ports and Webster Shipping Company but Liz knows why he's there. He's there to claim his property...her. No matter how much she despises him she can't escape the desires that build within her when he's near. It isn't really Benton she wants, she wants Carlton to dominate her but she can't seem to find a conversation that starts with, "hey would you mind whipping me?"

On a rare moment alone in Carlton's apartment Liz stumbles into a room that contains Carlton's own little secrets. Now she knows he enjoys sexual play, but still how to approach it? As Carlton becomes green with ENVY over her comfort level with Benton Frazier, Liz struggles to keep her past from the man she loves.
