Chicken Every Sunday - My Life With Mother's Boarders Rosemary Taylor

This novel looks at life through the eyes of the children of the house. The characters are situated in an Arizona boarding house, where many people go to the desert for the 'cure' of what ails them. The characters are more than a bit eccentric and very individual; Mother copes with everything, including having a husband that it seems, is just one more child; and, the children grow up secure in the knowledge that their Mother's chicken is sought after even it getting it to the table can be difficult. Very funny.
