Most high school graduates that will be heading off to college have no idea of the issues they'll be facing over the next 4 or 5 years, nor the consequences of the actions they take in reacting to these issues. Many of these issues are likely overlooked by parents before sending their newly-crowned high school grads out of the nest, including DUIs, date-rape drugs, binge-drinking, pregnancy, tanning, gambling and tattoos.

Lom addresses these issues and more, and further offers his own humble advice on how to handle them. He also includes several humorous stories from his collegiate days. It's been called the perfect stocking stuffer or send-off gift for high school grads, not only for the parents' own children and their friends, but also those kids they may not have seen in 10 or so years. The subject matter addressed makes this book a must-read for both parents and graduates! This book is Lom's 3rd Edition and contains new and updated information on subjects addressed in the previous two editions plus new issues that he deemed relevant and important enough to include herein.
